IN DEFENSE OF "HANGING OUT"

I never ran the Boston Marathon, but when I moved there years ago to lead the Boston Center for the Arts, I went to every one of them. Marathon Mondays, First Nights on New Years Eve and the concerts on the Commons. These events (and the Red Sox) were the Boston way of life. So when the news of the bombing came last week, I, like many others saw it not just as a tragedy, but as an assault on our way of life. Those of us who work in the arts and recreation understand and appreciate “gathering” as a human need. While sports and arts may provide a rationale for a festival, outdoor concert, sports meet or street fair, the “getting together,” the “hanging out,” and the socialization is the public benefit of these occasions.

Our current exhibition is about “placemaking,” which is the trend for cities and towns to use the arts and entertainment to make places more liveable, more inviting, more conducive to blending life, work and play in one location. According to the NEA, “creative placemaking” is when public, private, not-for-profit, and community sectors partner to strategically shape the physical and social character of a neighborhood, town, tribe, city, or region around arts and cultural activities.

This phenomenon has reclaimed many a city since the suburbanization of the 60s. A concerted effort on the part of downtown planners has given a whole new future to cities like Pittsburgh and San Antonio, which have created cultural districts offering an abundance of cultural venues and activities. These are, in other words, places for people to gather. What I wonder about is whether the bombings in Boston can potentially put “creative placemaking” at risk. Are we as a society prepared to protect and preserve “gathering”?

I began to think about all the trips I haven’t taken since 9/11 and the sheer unpleasantness and exhaustion of airport security. What if more and more of the places we want to go require the same screening as in an airport? As it is now, we open our bags and backpacks at museums and theaters. Why not at festivals and fairs? Will the hassle so outweigh the fun that we won’t want to go to a jazz fest or a crafts fair? And what does freedom in America mean if our choices become so narrow that we all have only the freedom to stay home? I am prepared to stand up for “hanging out” until no one joins me. I, for one, will keep on planning cultural events until no one shows up.

Judith Schwartz
Recognized by New York University

ArtsWestchester board member Judith Schwartz was recognized by New York University (NYU) President John Sexton for her more than 25 years of dedicated service at NYU, where she is a Professor of Art and Art Education and also serves as head of the university’s Sculpture: Craft Media Area.

The Visual Symphony Art Exhibition at United Hebrew’s Lazarus Gallery

Like an orchestra that combines a variety of instruments, an array of media come together under a common theme in The Visual Symphony, an art exhibition inspired by music and movement currently on view at The Lazarus Gallery of United Hebrew of New Rochelle. Guest curated by Robin Zane with Lazarus Gallery Curator Jodi Moise, the show features over 25 artists from around the U.S., many of whom are from the Westchester area. The artworks, in a wide range of media — including sculpture, photography, ceramics, collage and jewelry — capture the essence of melody through form, texture, familiar and unfamiliar objects, and figurative and abstract images to create a symphonic gallery of colors. The show is on view now through September 16. For more info, visit: www.uhgc.org.

Westchester Symphonic Winds Celebrates 25th Anniversary

Formed by two New Rochelle High School students with the help of their former band director, James D. Wayne, the Westchester Symphonic Winds (WSW) is now celebrating its 25th anniversary with 60 wind and percussion players. The WSW will perform its gala concert at Tarrytown Music Hall on Saturday, May 18, under the leadership of their award-winning Music Director Curt Ebersole.

Dr. Mallory Thompson, Director of Bands at Northwestern University, and Dr. Thomas McCauley, Director of Bands at Montclair State University, will join WSW as special guest conductors. Selections include Gershwin’s Rhapsody in Blue and the stirring Finale, from Symphony No. 1 by Viasili Kalinnikov. For more info, visit: www.tarrytownmusichall.org.

Black Marble Duo at Downtown Music at Grace

The husband and wife team that make the Black Marble Duo, violinists Jörg-Michael Schwarz and Karen Marie Marmer, join Downtown Music at Grace’s noonday concert series on May 15. Co-Directors of the internationally acclaimed baroque ensemble, REBEL, Schwarz and Marmer play rare and virtuosic pieces, aiming to explore seldom performed repertoires on instruments and bows appropriate to their respective periods. The duo has performed at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, in the Kendal-on-Hudson Concert Series and in Midtown Concerts in New York City. Their Downtown Music performance will feature works by Mozart, Emanuelle Barbella, Jean-Marie Leclair, Clair-Nicolas Roget, William Shield, and Georg Philipp Telemann. The concert begins at 12:10pm at Grace Church in White Plains. For more info, visit: www.dtmusic.org.

Axial Theatre Presents Howard Meyer’s Radiance

This month, Axial Theatre will present the premiere performance of Radiance, from the theatre’s Artistic Director and Playwright Howard Meyer. The play explores toxic relationships and a toxic environment — revolving around the Los Alamos National Lab, developer of America’s first nuclear warheads. The production renews Axial’s commitment to producing new works that promote a dialogue about serious and important issues. “We hope it will create an awareness of a real life environmental threat, thousands of miles away, for an audience that lives in the shadow of Indian Point,” said Meyer. The production previews May 2, opens May 4, and runs through May 19. For tickets and more info, visit: www.axialtheatre.org.

Siobhan McBride Wins Alexander Rutsch Award

Pelham Art Center has announced artist Siobhan McBride as the winner of the 2013 Alexander Rutsch Award and Solo Exhibition for Painting. Selected from more than 650 applicants and nine finalists, McBride will receive a solo exhibition among her prizes. The exhibition will be on view at the Pelham Art Center, May 3–June 2. The artist describes the scenes she paints as, “descriptions of awkward experiences, passages from books and film fragments, things caught in the corner of my eye, and an attempt to conjure slippery memories.” Collaged images in paint give the scenes she depicts a surreal essence. McBride is the seventh winner of the biannual Rutsch Award, which honors the memory of Alexander Rutsch (1916-1997), an artist and active supporter of the Pelham Art Center for more than 25 years. For more info, visit: www.PelhamArtCenter.org.
ARTSW CLASSES

ArtsWestchester has expanded its class offerings for its summer semester which will include clay art workshops, drawing and anime, and photography. The classes are designed to provide youth with artistic opportunities in downtown White Plains.

My Community: A Photographic Journey with Rick Falco teaches children to use a digital camera and photo editing programs to tell a story that documents their environment.

In Basic Drawing and Anime with Alan Reingold, students will learn basic drawing techniques such as proportion and composition in the style of Japanese anime.

In association with Clay Art Center, Clay Saturdays will introduce students to technical clay skills and Figure It Out will allow children to explore the art and creation of figure sculpture. This summer semester includes a Clay Art Center class for senior citizens as well: C.L.A.Y. (Continue Learning About Yourself) is for the young at heart.

All-Women Jazz on Super Soul Saturday

Saturday, May 4 at 8pm | ArtsWestchester

The all-women jazz, blues, and contemporary ensemble SAGE mixes nostalgia with cutting-edge ingenuity, producing a sound that is both familiar and unique. In a celebration of Mother’s Day and the return of spring, the group will be performing on May 4 at 8pm as part of Live@ArtsWestchester’s spring concert series. Known for its repertoire and vision, SAGE and its members have opened for and appeared with Ray Charles, Regina Carter and the Duke Ellington Show Choir, and have headlined at The Waldorf Astoria, The Shubert Theater and an Inaugural Ball honoring President Obama. Part sassy and part nostalgic, SAGE consists of five talented musicians, each bringing her own, unique identity to the group. The end result is a skillfully unified, but dynamic sound that transcends time and declares its significance in the world of jazz. They’ll be joined by Andrea & James Rohlehr and the AndJam Band, in addition to the Soul Synergy Revue. The performance rounds out an energetic weekend of music, following the Friday, May 3 Evening of Piedmont Blues featuring Phil Wiggins, Tony Walker and Piedmont Bluz. Lost and Found in Yonkers

Beginning May 4, Blue Door Gallery (BDG) will present an exhibition that explores the studied use of making found objects into unexpected and meaningful artwork. Lost and Found in Yonkers displays the work of 21 exhibiting artists who create collage, assemblage and mixed media from recycled materials and found objects. New to BDG is L. Brandon Krall with her installation that pays homage to Marcel Duchamp (bicycle) and Richard Lund’s precise stellar objects. The show, co-curated by Arlé Sklar-Weinstein and Luis Perelman, is on view through June 1. An Artist Reception will take place on May 9 from 5-7pm. For more information, visit: www.bluedoorart.org.

Also by the Blue Door Artist Association...

The Blue Door Artist Association has also installed a series of sculptural totems, The Nine Muses by artist Richard Pitts, now on view in the atrium of the Yonkers Riverfront Library. It is a tribute to the Nine Muses of Greek Mythology – deities who gave artists the inspiration for creation – who have had a long history and influence on our culture, reaching across the centuries. Arranged into an architectural pattern suitable for contemplation, The Nine Muses will be on display at the library for at least two years. For more info, visit: www.bluedoorart.org.

Re-Imagining Past Possessions. Works of Recycled Materials.

A new exhibition at transFORM Gallery, Re-Imagining Past Possessions: Works of Recycled Materials, brings artists from around the world together with the intention to make a difference in saving the earth. Co-curated with Elisa Contemporary Art, this exhibition, on view through May 31, features the artwork of five artists—a Canadian, New Yorker, Chilean, Uruguayan and Irish-Korean—whose work is created from recycled and reused materials, including magazines, scrap metal, junk mail and other discarded items. “Our artists re-imagine the debris and discarded materials of our planet to create a new vision,” says Lisa Cooper, co-curator and owner of Elisa Contemporary Art. Artists include Carole Eisner, Aurora Robson, Rodolfo Edward, Lisa Mee Doherty and Adriana Rostovsky. For more information, visit: www.transformgallery.com.

Emelin Theater presents
ELISA MONTE DANCE
Saturday, May 4 at 8pm

Dancer and choreographer Elisa Monte has always been drawn to the exploration of unfamiliar cultures. As a result, her work has attracted dancers from diverse backgrounds. With a strong foundation as a student of George Balanchine and Martha Graham, Monte's work was praised by Alvin Ailey, who brought her first choreographic work into his company's repertoire. For more info on the May 4 performance, visit: www.emelin.org. On May 2, members of the Elisa Monte Dance Company will conduct two Master Classes at the Steffi Nossen School of Dance. For more information on classes, visit: www.steffinossen.org.

PLACEMAKING
Re-envisioning White Plains
6-9PM | 31 MAMARONECK AVE | WHITE PLAINS, NY

Focusing on one-square block at the epicenter of the White Plains’ business, residential, and leisure districts, 26 artists present imaginative concepts for activating downtown White Plains. Their artistic visions for the city’s most visited and trafficked corridor will give residents a sense of how public art can animate, distinguish, and enliven their streetscape.

WHAT IS PUBLIC ART?
Public art is loosely defined as any work of art placed in the public realm for viewing. Site specific art is work that responds directly to the site in which it is intended, taking into account the site’s natural and social history as well as its present use. Site specific public art has the potential to deepen public awareness of a neighborhood or district, and to draw additional creative energy to the area.
