The NEA and Its Impact

by Janet Langsam, ArtsWestchester CEO

The year 1965 was a mixed bag. The Sound of Music played to crowds. The Beatles released Help. Music legend Jerry Garcia came on the scene. More troops were sent to Vietnam. Women hiked up their hemlines to don the mini skirt. The civil rights march from Selma to Montgomery rocked the country. President Lyndon Johnson envisioned The Great Society, introducing Medicare and launching the National Endowment for the Arts. Communities across the country, including our own, were given a stake in the arts in America.

The arts are not only good for the soul but, according to Americans for the Arts (AFTA), they’re also good for the economy. AFTA reports that 4.8 million Americans work in arts and culture industries, and that the arts generate $22.3 billion in federal, state and local government revenue. In Westchester, 4,800 individuals work in the cultural industry and produce a $156 million economic impact.

The major driver of arts initiatives across the country is the National Endowment for the Arts, which distributes some $148 million a year to organizations nationwide in every congressional district. However, warning clouds have been circling the NEA for some time and, right now, it is unclear as to whether the agency will survive efforts in Washington to disband it.

Senators Schumer and Gillibrand know that, in New York, funding for the arts is essential. In 2016 alone, the NEA awarded a total of $16,717,675 in grant money to 522 nonprofit and governmental arts organizations. Of this NEA funding, over $750,000 went to New York State Council on the Arts. The state then matched these federal funds and awarded grants to 1,240 arts organizations in 215 communities across New York State – including, of course, Westchester.

NEA grants provide a significant return on investment of federal dollars, as $1 of NEA direct funding leverages up to $9 in private and other public funds, which resulted in $500 million in matching support in 2016. NEA grants are indeed coveted. Why? Because winning one tells the world that the grantee is operating an impactful local program of top national quality. But it’s not just about New York and Westchester, it’s about our nation and “for what it stands.”

Weekly Adult Jam Sessions at Lagond Music School

Lagond Music School (LMS) has announced an expansion of its current offerings in order to extend its reach into the local music community. LMS welcomes practicing and professional musicians of every skill level to its new Sunday night adult jam sessions at The Haven at Lagond, the School’s Elmsford rehearsal and performance space. Attending musicians, 18 years of age and older, will bring their instruments and participate in an interactive jam session on a fully-equipped professional sound-stage. Each week’s session will explore a new genre, such as rock, jazz or funk. Spectators are also welcome to attend and watch the lively performances. For more info, visit: lagondmusic.org.

City of Yonkers Receives Grant from National Endowment for the Arts

The City of Yonkers has received a $20,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) for The Enslaved Africans’ Rain Garden, a public art project that will commemorate the enslaved Africans who once resided in the City. A portion of land in downtown Yonkers has been designated for the exhibit, which will consist of five life-sized sculptures by Westchester artist Vinnie Bagwell. The project also received support from ArtsWestchester’s Arts Alive grants program, as well as the City of Yonkers. The NEA grant funds will be used to create a pair of sculptures that depicts two children, Sola and Olemide. For more info on this project, visit: enslavedafricansraingarden.org.

Pelham Art Center Launches New Public Art Program

Pelham Art Center (PAC) has announced a public art program in conjunction with the grand opening of the newly-renovated Wolf Lane Park in Pelham. This “Public Art in the Park” program aims to promote free arts access for the public. The inaugural exhibition in the sculpture garden area of the park is Anki King’s Human Nature, which will be on view at both the Park and PAC’s courtyard through September 2. The Norwegian artist creates sculptural figures, composed of rebar, wood and natural materials, which explore the human connection to the natural world. King explains: “Human Nature speaks to humanity’s dependency on nature and the tension effected, as humanity … is at the same time capable of destroying [nature] – and thereby itself.” For more info, visit: pelhamartcenter.org.

Papermaking Enlivens the Classroom at Riverside High School in Yonkers

ArtsWestchester teaching artist Dene Ross recently presented a papermaking and bookmaking workshop for 11th and 12th grade students at Riverside High School in Yonkers. The students created cotton paper from pulp and incorporated design projects that were created in their Computer class in order to make handmade books. New York Assemblyman Gary Pretlow joined Ross and the students in the papermaking activity. This residency was funded by an ArtsWestchester Arts Alive Grant, which is made possible by the Decentralization Program of the New York State Council on the Arts, and with the support of Governor Andrew Cuomo and the New York State Legislature.
ArtsWestchester presents a free members-only event in its downtown White Plains gallery on June 16. Members are invited to attend, and receive priority seating at, ArtsWestchester’s “Stories and Sounds From Back in the Day” event (more on page A10). An exclusive reception will take place prior to the event, during which ArtsWestchester’s Gallery Director will host a free guided tour of the organization’s current From the Streets exhibition. To become a member of ArtsWestchester and receive these benefits, visit: artsw.org/membership.

ArtsWestchester encourages groups, schools and organizations to book a private group tour of its current From the Streets exhibition. The show explores the evolution of graffiti and street artists, from vandals to cultural trendsetters. For more about the exhibition, see page A10 and visit artsw.org/fromthestreets. Docent-led tours are available by appointment on Tuesdays through Saturdays in ArtsWestchester’s gallery through July 15. To schedule this art experience, contact Kim McKoy at 914-428-4220 or kmckoy@artswestchester.org.

Caramoor Center for Music and the Arts will kick off its summer season on June 17 with a gala that honors ArtsWestchester “for its steadfast support of Caramoor and advocacy for the arts in our community.” The night will also feature the first of five performances that celebrate the 20th anniversary (and final season) of Bel Canto at Caramoor with an evening of Italian opera. Artist-in-Residence soprano Angela Meade will be featured in a program that includes popular overtures, classic arias and more. For more info, visit: caramoor.org.

Comedian Bill Burr Performs Three Shows at The Capitol Theatre

Comedian Bill Burr will take the stage at The Capitol Theater with a set of three 18-and-over shows from June 29 through July 1. Burr is known for his direct comedy style that offers a cynical take on common experiences within our culture—whether he is complaining about his GPS device or about notions of religion. Often sparing no feelings, his anecdotal humor is cutting and honest, putting political correctness on the back-burner for the sake of his art. Named one of Rolling Stone’s “50 best stand-up comics of all time,” Burr has had numerous stand-up specials on Comedy Central and Netflix, as well as his television roles on Chappelle’s Show, Breaking Bad and his animated Netflix series, F is for Family. His popular off-the-cuff, twice-weekly comedy podcast, Monday Morning Podcast, spurred “All Things Comedy,” a distribution network, founded by Burr and fellow comedian Al Madrigal, which is owned and operated entirely by comedians. RiverArts Showcases 80 Music Performances on a Single Day

On June 3, eighty performances, from opera arias to traditional songs of Zimbabwe, will take place at twenty-five venues across Westchester County’s Rivertowns on a single day. Presented by RiverArts for the third year, this “Music Tour” will span Irvington, Dobbs Ferry, Hastings-on-Hudson and Tarrytown, and will take place in locales that range from churches and jazz clubs to renowned jazz saxophonist Gary Smulyan’s own front porch. The event is meant to be a celebration of the rich and diverse artistic offerings that are available in these local communities: a family blues roots band, Bash the Trash, will play on unusual musical instruments built from recycled materials in Irvington; accordion ensemble Bachtopus performs music from Bach to present-day tunes in Dobbs Ferry; Mark Morganelli & the Jazz Forum All Stars perform jazz & Brazilian tunes in Tarrytown’s new Jazz Forum Club; and Ed Horan offers an eclectic mix of Spanish, flamenco, classical and pop in Hastings-on-Hudson. All events are free to the public. For more info, visit: musictour.riverarts.org.

More Than 70 Artists Open Their Doors For 20th Annual Peekskill Open Studios

For its 20th year, Peekskill Arts Alliance (PAA) presents its Peekskill Open Studios event. On June 3 and 4, more than 70 artists will display their works through open studios, pop-up galleries, special exhibits and more throughout the City. Families and guests are invited to visit an array of events, including Off the Beaten Path, an exhibit at Westchester Community College Center for Digital Arts that will showcase PAA members who do not have downtown Peekskill studios. A mobile gallery will take over the Central Avenue parking lot by trucks, which will be rented by artists and turned into provisional galleries. In a live collaboration, painters will create works of art that are inspired by poetry as it is read aloud. A curated exhibit at Paramount Hudson Valley, Transplanted: Hopes, Fears and Dreams, will focus on the trials and tribulations of immigrants in America.

Guided tours take place each day, beginning at the gazebo, at 1 and 3pm. Visitors can meet the artists in open studios and observe their work. Artists include: David Moskowitz, whose handmade jewelry is made with natural materials; Berenice Pliskin, whose silk paintings narrate complex scenes in bright vibrant colors; and Jessica Dugan’s porcelain and stoneware pots. Additional venues include Hudson Valley Center for Contemporary Art, which will offer free admission throughout the weekend, Peekskill Clay Studios, and The Field Library Gallery. For more info, visit: peekskillartists.org.
This June, the Rye Arts Center (RAC) and Steffi Nossen Dance Foundation (SNDF) each offer specialized dance classes in a creative group setting for individuals with Parkinson’s Disease (PD). The programs are both based on The Mark Morris Dance Company’s internationally acclaimed Dance for PD program and are led by professionally-trained dancers whose knowledge about movement benefits its participants. PD causes the death of nerve cells in the brain that release dopamine, a chemical which facilitates movement in the body. Although dance is not a cure for the disease, according to the Dance for PD program’s resources, it does help patients to build a stronger connection to movement and also instills confidence.

RAC, which launched its Dance for Parkinson’s program in 2011, offers free classes on Wednesdays and Fridays year-round (except August). Noah Opitz, Director of Development at RAC, has noticed that the classes create a sense of community for the participants. He explains: “Depression is common among PD patients, and programs like these provide them with a support group.”

SNDF’s Parkinson’s Dance program takes place every Monday year-round (this session ends of June 18 and will resume on August 21). According to Judith Ross, Community Relations Director at SNDF, the classes serve a special need in the community and also fulfill SNDF’s mission to bring dance to everyone. Additional special needs classes include “Moving Wheels and Heels Dance Intensive,” a one-week dance experience for students with and without disabilities (June 19-24).

Both PD programs integrate movement from modern, ballet, tap, folk and choreographic repertory and include an array of music. Megan Williams, Choreographer and Dance Instructor at RAC, explains that the art of dancing inspires a transformation in participants and frees them from their daily routine: “When patients step into the dance room, they are no longer a person with Parkinson’s. They become beginner dancers on a fun artistic pursuit.” Both classes welcome walk-ins. For more info, visit: ryeartscenter.org and steffinossen.org.

Landscapes: a Birdseye View at Bullseye Glass

The work of Montana glass artist Richard Parrish is on display in a solo exhibition that has traveled to Bullseye Glass Resource Center in Mamaroneck from the Rockwell Museum in Corning, NY. Aerial Perspectives draws from Parrish’s experiences as an architect, bringing shapes, patterns and vibrant washes of color to his landscape-based kilnformed works. By mapping out fields, rivers and crop irrigation patterns, these pieces provide viewers with a look at the natural world from an aerial viewpoint. Kirsty Buchanan, Curator of Collections at The Rockwell Museum, explains that “by manipulating the expected vantage point, Parrish controls our engagement with the subject matter and causes us to view the shifting topography of America from a different perspective.” The installations investigate this interaction, between the natural environment and human beings’ shifting involvement and imposition within that landscape. Aerial Perspectives is on view through July 1. For more info, visit: bullseyegallery.com.

Burgers and Beers With the Philharmonic: a Father’s Day Celebration

On June 18, Westchester Philharmonic presents a full day Father’s Day celebration: “Burgers, Beer and B-flat Minor.” This season finale places guest pianist Conrad Tao on stage with New York City Ballet’s Music Director, conductor Andrew Litton. The program will include Weber’s Overture to Euryanthe before Tao joins in Tchaikovsky’s Piano Concerto No. 1 and Dvorak’s New World Symphony. Following the concert, the Philharmonic invites audiences to join Litton, Tao and members of the orchestra at a barbecue, complete with cold beer and live bluegrass music. Music lovers can start their day by attending an open, free-of-charge rehearsal at 11am. They can also add to their musical experience with a pre-concert discussion between Litton and Tao with the Philharmonic’s Artistic and Executive Director Joshua Worby one hour before the performance, at 2pm. The concert will take place at the Performing Arts Center at Purchase College. For more info, visit: westchesterphil.org.

Exhibition at Hudson Valley Center for Contemporary Art Explores the Nature of Memory

Hudson Valley Center for Contemporary Art presents the work of Korean artist Jinsu Han in two community-focused installations. The site-specific works called on the involvement of the Peekskill community, as well as the Mantou School in Cold Spring. Individuals were asked to bring in bowls or containers that represent a family memory or story. The installations, Liquid Memory, speak to the nature of memory and honors the collective memories of participants. Robotic elements create movement, which metaphorically and physically alters the assigned “memory” along the way. Han’s hope is that the containers, through this experience, will now represent a new memory to their owners as well.

The Center has several other exhibitions and installations on display this month, including Between I & Thou, which explores personal and cultural interconnections, and Elisa Pritzker’s Selknam: Spirit, Ceremony, Selves, about an extinct aborigine tribe of Tierra del Fuego. Liquid Memory is on view from June 4 through August 30. An opening reception will take place on June 4. For more info, visit hvcca.org.

The Live Energy of Rock Band Queen, Recreated in Westchester

Diehard Queen fans want to relive the band’s live concerts. New Queen fans who never got the chance to see them perform want to experience what it was like to see iconic singer Freddie Mercury command the stage. For all of the above, cover band Almost Queen is as close to the real thing as one can get. The four-piece band has a sound that is reminiscent of Queen’s harmonies, while their costumes and theatrical backgrounds recapture the energy and style of the legendary band. White Plains Performing Arts Center will present a performance by Almost Queen on June 23. All proceeds from the band’s concert merchandise are donated to Mercury Phoenix Trust, a charity that was founded by Queen members Brian May and Roger Taylor, and manager Jim Beach, in memory of Mercury, who died from AIDS in 1991. Almost Queen bassist Randy Gregg, who plays the role of John Deacon, told ArtsNews that guests can expect to hear “the big hits,” with which the band enjoys seeing fans “ranging from 8-80 years old” sing along. Speaking about his admiration of Queen, he added: “They paved the road and we’re just walking on it.” For more info, visit wppac.com.
On Friday, May 19, ArtsWestchester welcomed 500 guests into its historic landmark building to enjoy art, entertainment and tastings from top local eateries. Performances by Legendary Rappers and Hip Hop Dancers Bring ArtsWestchester’s Urban Art Exhibition to Life

Behind the global art phenomenon that is graffiti today lies an expansive history – from young vandals trying to find their voice in the 1970s to urban art that graces gallery walls as masterpieces. ArtsWestchester will take audiences back to these beginnings of hip hop culture and early practices of graffiti with a series of community and Folk Arts programs related to its current exhibition, From the Streets. The exhibition chronicles the rise of the urban artist from vandal and outlaw to cultural trendsetter.

These upcoming gallery events demonstrate the transformation of this art form and provide a broader cultural context to the exhibiting artworks. A number of these programs are also focused on hip hop as folk art traditions, due to their origins in community-based practices. Folklorist Elena Martinez, who developed three of the programs as part of ArtsWestchester’s Folk Arts program, explains: “The roots of hip hop culture are in the streets and playgrounds of the Bronx in the late 1960s and early 1970s, where Blacks and Latinos would gather for outdoor parties and a DJ would patch his sound system into the power box of a streetlight and play records.”

Graffiti and hip hop were established by new cultural practices and traditions in music, dancing and visuals arts, and were shaped by the diverse community in the Bronx, in response to a time of worsening economic and social issues. These traditions became a collection of shared customs that the community used to express themselves – from “tagging” subway cars to creating memorial walls as a ceremonial reflection of the rising violence in the City.

The From the Streets programs include a variety of documentary screenings, panel discussions and performances. A lively panel discussion with artists and museum professionals will explore the place of graffiti in the global market during “Vandalism vs. Capitalism: Which is the Dirtier Word?” (June 12). On the weekend of June 16, ArtsWestchester’s Folk Arts program, which is made possible with the New York State Council on the Art, will examine hip hop traditions with two events: an evening of “Stories and Sounds From Back in the Day,” featuring legendary hip hop rapper Curtis “Grandmaster Caz” Brown and Grand Wizzard Theodore, the DJ credited with the “scratching” technique (June 16); and “The Sisterhood of Hip Hop,” during which female hip hop performers and b-girls will discuss how women broke the boundaries of their “male-dominated” art form (June 17). Rounding out the From the Streets events will be a documentary screening of Saving Banksy tells of a misguided art collector’s attempts to save a Banksy painting from destruction (July 14).

All events will take place in ArtsWestchester’s gallery, immersing audiences into the historical trajectory of the captivating artworks that surround them. From the Streets will remain on view through July 15. For more info, visit: artsw.org/fromthestreets.

As a highly specialized electric vehicle engineering company based in Mount Kisco, Curtis Instruments doesn’t sell to the public. Yet, we want to let the local community know that we are a good neighbor and a responsible corporate citizen. ArtsNews Advertising gets excellent results for us because cultured, educated, thinking people read this important arts publication. Our ads get wide exposure and Curtis achieves the positive image recognition and awareness we seek. It’s a powerful partnership!

Chances are you’ve never bought a single product we make, but . . .

We provide mobility

We’re Curtis Instruments.

Headquartered in Mt. Kisco since 1960, we’re a world leader in the design, engineering and manufacture of control systems and display instruments for all types of electric vehicles, including highly advanced and sophisticated, yet affordable wheelchair control technology.

Though we’re global in scale, we’ve never forgotten our roots, which is why we remain a strong corporate supporter of the communities and causes here in Westchester County. That’s just one reason we’ve been consistently ranked as one of the top “Best Companies to Work for in New York.”

We put our heart and soul into making the best wheelchair systems possible.
